

The fact that the FCC is involved in this issue shows the lack of good parenting in this country. No responsible parent would allow their children to watch violent or sexually explicit programs. Especially with today's technology there are ways of keeping these types of programs out of our homes. I believe the answer is to require intense parenting classes in every semester of High School. These days it seems like you have to tell people the difference between right and wrong.